CLOSE OF HIGH SCHOOL

FIFTY-NINE GRADUATES GIVEN THEIR DIPLOMAS BEFORE LARGE AUDIENCE

Amid lights and music, flowers, smiles, thundering applause and the good wishes of their friends and relatives; with eager youth looking out from bright eyes, the senior class of 1915 bade farewell to Glendale Union high school and took the road for higher education or for the world. If excellence of equipment counts for anything, and we all know it counts for much, the students of the class of 1915 are better fitted out for the great struggle of life than any class that went before them. That is also the opinion of Principal Moyses and of the other teachers of the school.

Those who saw the confident array of young life that graced the platform in the auditorium of the school Thursday evening realized that a good fighting contingent was on its way to join the forces at the colleges, universities, the offices and the industries of the land. It certainly will not be the fault of their directors who outfitted them for that warfare if any of them fail to reach the goal at which they aim.

When the class of 1915 marched onto the stage to the inspiring strains of Hollaender's "Processional," they looked on a veritable sea of faces. The large auditorium was filled to the door with an enthusiastic and appreciative audience. An appropriate note of solemn thought was thrown into the atmosphere of the audience by the brief and chaste invocation for divine blessing offered by the Rev. J. H. Troy of the First Baptist church.

Cecil Crandall, a Glendale youth, who has won the golden opinions of the whole community by his genius and his modesty, played one of Sarasate's beautiful Spanish dances.

Young Crandall showed a wonderful mastery of his instrument. His double stopping in the charming piece he selected was uniformly even and executed without a trace of effort. This beautiful performance elicited overwhelming applause and Cecil responded with an "Andante" of great beauty and sweetness. The audience was not aware that this composition was the work of Cecil himself or the unmistakable delight and appreciation with which it was received would have been redoubled. The reception given Cecil Crandall is a tribute to the high school and also to the teaching of Mrs. Dora L. Gibson, who gave him his first training in the music classes of the school and in the high school orchestra. Principal Moyses in his presentation of the class gave particular attention to the work of young Crandall, who began work with the class of 1915, but was persuaded to leave by his friends and to take up the study of the violin under special masters. With all the progress he has made, and it is wonderful, Cecil never fails to come back to help his beloved school on special occasions. Judging from his masterly performance Thursday night, this young man will rise to some eminence in the musical world.

Principal Moyses then introduced Ethelbert D. Warfield, LL. D., formerly president of Miami university and also of Lafayette college, as the speaker of the evening. He referred to Dr. Warfield as a man who had played a large part in the field of education in the East and stated that he had now settled in Los Angeles. Dr. Warfield spoke on "A Liberal Education." The address will be found in another column.

Following the address came a marvelously sweet part song by Elgar, the great English composer. This was entitled "Down in the Woodland" and was rendered with much charm, precision and smoothness by the Senior Girls' Glee club.

Then came the presentation of the class memorial by Hastings A. Bidwell. Referring to the presentations of past years, Bidwell said that each class sought to give something in the way of a gift that would be a permanent addition to the school. It was felt by the students that those gifts should have a practical value that would make of them a memorial for years to come. The graduating class of 1912 had endowed the school with a bed of Cecil Brunner roses; 1913's seniors had given the large picture of Lincoln that now adorns the walls; in 1914 the class sought to emphasize the value of time by presenting the school with a sundial; the senior class of 1915 had sought to find something that would be useful and had erected a new drinking fountain on the athletic field. He referred scholastically to Thales' characterization of water as "the source of all things;" to St. John's beautiful report of Christ's exposition of the water of life; to the lessons of the European war; to the value of water on the desert at our doors, and in the arid lands of

WHY HESITATE LONGER

GET YOUR SHARE OF THE $2000 IN PRIZES OFFERED BY THE EVENING NEWS

Do you want an auto? Then why not take advantage of the fact that the Glendale Evening News is offering an $850 Maxwell touring car as first prize to the person turning in the greatest number of subscriptions in the next ten weeks.

Have you ever stopped to think that you may be one of these persons capable of doing more active, result-getting subscription business in less time than another contestant?

Then why should you hesitate to become a contestant for votes in the Evening News $2000 popularity contest?

The News readers realize that an unprecedented opportunity to obtain worth-while and valuable prizes is being offered through the automobile and prize-giving contest.

Remember, $2000 in prizes "good as gold" offered for a little agreeable and interesting endeavor, is not an every-day occurrence.

In this day of stupendous undertakings, it is not only an unusual opportunity, but one well worth consideration. The more entrants in the contest, the merrier, for the more who enter, the better chance for each to win. One contestant has as good an opportunity as another to obtain votes enough to win the Maxwell touring car, the $400 Schiller piano, or any of the many other valuable prizes.

The more competition for votes, the less votes it will take to win. Every contestant who enters The News contest and does not win a prize, will be given ten per cent of every new subscription turned in.

Don't hesitate about entering any longer. DO SO TODAY.

New Mexico, Arizona and Nevada, and concluded with a formal presentation of the fountain to the school, expressing the hope that it would long keep the memory of the senior class of 1915 fresh in the hearts of the succeeding school generations.

Principal George U. Moyses in accepting the gift made fitting reference to the pleasing custom of class gifts and expressed the belief that the drinking fountain presented by the class of 1915 would not be the least acceptable of them.

Principal Moyses, in presenting the class of 1915, said that Glendale Union high school had at last obtained through its new buildings and equipment what it had been seeking for some time to fit it for carrying on its work with the greatest efficiency. The school did not aim at making tradespeople or mechanical experts out of the students, but it did aim at giving the student a chance to work with his hands and find out the lines along which he was best fitted to work. It was now easy for the student to learn a great deal of mechanical work in the shops, which had been fitted with machinery of the most perfect type. The machines themselves were the machines of experts and there was nothing in the way of woodwork or turned or forged steel work that could not be manufactured by the pupils if they desired. Even if the student had no intention of pursuing such work in the world, the training afforded him here could not fail to be of immense value to him.

In similar manner the girls profited largely by the sewing school and the school of domestic science. They were happy in the household work section and had a fine field in the model bungalow to perfect themselves in domestic arts. If the students were happy they did better work. Everywhere this spirit of contentment could be encountered in the school and he felt, he said, that the year 1915 saw the school doing more work and better work than it had ever done. It was turning out to the world each year better men and women.

In presenting the class of 1915 the principal said that one of their number—fifty-nine—75 per cent had elected to go on to higher education. That was a high percentage. Their resolve pleased him greatly; but what pleased him still more was the fact that the class had exhibited a high moral standard and had striven after a standard of excellence in all things. Where all were so uniformly excellent it was difficult to make selections on the score of merit. A standard had been set up which demanded a four years' course. Students standing above 92 per cent in the first year were presented with an honor pin; in the second year, if they maintained their standard, they got a star placed on the leaf of the book that ornamented the pin; in the third year similar excellency brought them two stars, and in their fourth year the bronze pins, as a reward for class (Continued on page 4)

DR. E. D. WARFIELD ADDRESSES SENIOR CLASS

A LIBERAL EDUCATION IS THE SUBJECT OF WELL-KNOWN EDUCATOR AT COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES OF GLENDALE UNION HIGH SCHOOL

"Looking about this beautiful city of Glendale, with its fine educational buildings, its appropriate surroundings, its library and all the circle of its educational life, it is easy to see that the intelligent citizens here believe in liberally endowing education with everything that can make it a perfectly equipped department of civic existence. It is characteristic of California to be thus liberal with education. As someone once said, 'Education is the religion of California.'"

"This spirit runs through the whole country. In the beautiful Pennsylvania college town in which I spent so long a time as head of the college, everything was given to that institution and lavished on educational buildings. The people felt that education was worthy of the best setting that could be provided for it. So much was this the case that when a rich man came to settle in the town and went ahead and built a beautiful residence for himself at great expense, the citizens resented the attitude he had assumed. They thought that such a personal setting was out of place and that the care and money bestowed on a purely private and personal environment should have been given to the college."

"It is something to have an ideal like this and to devote oneself to it; or for a community to devote themselves to it and not to the passing pleasure of the hour. It is a great thing to transmit through the medium of youth all that is admirable, excellent and valuable in this generation to the generation that is to succeed us."

"I congratulate Glendale on having provided for its educational system so much that it is materially good; but there is something more—that which makes an education itself liberal. If the liberality of today does not beget the life of tomorrow, it is valueless. This is the 'land of the free.' We are proud of the name; but do we know what it means? This nation is a development of the great Anglo-Germanic race; the race that loves the name of freedom. To be a free man is the ideal of the race. To that end all our education must tend; to make men who act and feel like moral and immortal creatures."

"When I hear people speaking of 'vocational education' I am inclined to doubt the wisdom of the phrase. My vocation is to be a man. I say with that delightful character, Davus, in Terence's 'Andria,' 'Homo sum et nihil humani a me alienum puto'—I am a man and I think nothing human alien to me. My vocation is to enlarge the scope of humanity, to broaden and deepen the life of all men. That is what I mean by vocational education—to lift up men to a larger life. If you mean that we should pursue 'vocational education' almost exclusively, I am not so sure about that."

"There is one fundamental difference between German education and American in this respect that the average German if asked, 'What are you going to be?' would answer, 'Oh, my father is a doctor; of course I am going to be a doctor.' Or 'My father is a shoemaker; of course I, too, am going to be a shoemaker.' In America, on the contrary, a boy would be more likely to say, 'My father is a doctor; I am going to be a civil engineer.' That is the new way of America. The boy is often inclined to think contrary to his parents' wishes. There is, of course, also the danger that parents may interfere with a boy's thoughts when he is thinking perfectly right—when by thinking he is accomplishing the end of his education."

"How to make a boy think is the great problem of education. There is a certain phase of life that is to a certain extent epidemic in California. You hear it on every hand. The constant cry, almost frenzied, is 'work, work, work!' I am not sure that I believe in that in any sense. Of course I believe in work. I believe in the old scriptural dictum, 'In the sweat of thy brow thou shalt earn thy bread.' I saw the other day that Edison, when asked to define genius, said 'Genius is one hundredth inspiration and ninety-nine hundredths perspiration.' I do not think that even Edison himself believed that. I think he was tempted to the use of the alliterative phrase. I think that a man ought not only to work with his hands, but also with his head. A boy or girl who will work with his or her hands unnecessarily is failing in the ideal of the race. We live in an age of invention and invention is the product of thought. The girl who will sew with her hands, using the old thread and needle, when she might use the machine to advantage, is failing in the ideal of the race; so is the boy who will use a handsaw when the power-saw is at his service."

"The little college I served so long sent out many men who have accomplished great things in this world. They have justified the existence of that college. One of them works for Andrew Carnegie. He discovered that better results were got from the blast furnaces on cold, dry days. He set himself to think, with the result that he built refrigerators close to the furnaces and cooled and dried the air that was forced through the molten iron and by that result of thought he effected a saving in the cost of manufacturing steel of eighteen million dollars in one year. That man worked with his brain, not with his hands or feet."

"In like manner a young man leaning over the parapet of a bridge watched the refuse from an oil refinery float down the surface of the stream. He was idle, this young man; his thoughts were on fishing; he regretted the pollution of the stream that had killed the trout; but as he saw the refuse float by he bethought himself of a way to get rid of it and yet to make it of value. From that idle fellow's idle thoughts came the modern process of making aniline dyes. The value of those dyes alone in one year amounted to $36,000,000."

"Work is good; but it must have an object. It must be directed toward the highest object the individual is capable of obtaining. To reach that object it is necessary to have knowledge. I have heard people speaking of 'useless knowledge.' I once heard a prominent educator using the phrase. I would have liked to have stopped him and said you have made a great discovery. You have found knowledge that is useless. No knowledge is useless. The man may be useless, the knowledge never. A man's head may be crammed full of knowledge, but he may not be able to get it out. Shut up there it cannot be used; but it is not useless."

"You must learn to use what you know. It is a great thing to be able to give articulate expression to what you know—by voice, pen or in song or music. I have often been struck while in Germany with marvelous sensitiveness of that nation to music. We have neglected that to some extent. We are not so sensitive nor so well educated in music. One of the mistakes of American life is not to cultivate personal and communal musical expression. Musical acquirement is part of a liberal education. Get rid of the idea that it is not important to be able to do something to the very finest degree of completeness. It is a fine thing to be able to say or do something that immediately puts us in touch with others; to make them sympathize with us. The Greeks had that fine sense of sympathy. The French have it; they have joy in what others do."

"There is no useless education. Take for instance the cultivation of foreign languages. How often is it undervalued in American life. Much of the failure of American commercial men to gain the trade of South America is to be attributed to this cause—their ignorance of the languages of that continent. The failure to cultivate the languages of other countries leads also to the failure to comprehend their spirit. Today all the world is embittered and the nations are arrayed against each other simply from a lack of understanding. If instead of the gospel of greed and land-grabbing the gospel of peace had been preached, in the language of the kingdom of heaven, what a different world we would have! Somewhere in the great heart of humanity there is a common chord that could be touched in amity."

"This is the land of prosperity. We have got to believe in a future that must include all that is noblest and best and if we expect to have it, we must not look for it in a mere holiday excursion into the realms of knowledge. Our opportunities of culture are large. Let us have something in our education that is not blood and iron, but the crystalline spirit of him who taught that love was the master passion."

"Let us have peace; but let it be the peace that is akin to that repose which follows effort. Heroism is after all the master word. You do not need to die to be a hero. There is as much heroism in patient endurance as in strenuous work. Someone well said, 'We are in the habit of praising the Pilgrim Fathers. Why not praise the Pilgrim Mothers. They had to endure all that the Pilgrim Fathers endured and they had in addition to endure the Pilgrim Father' (Continued on Page 2)

LAWSON NOT GUILTY

DOINGS IN RECORDER'S COURT—TWELVE MEN RENDER THEIR DECISION

In the recorder's court this morning before Judge Whomes, John W. Lawson was given a jury trial for an assault alleged to have been committed on the person of Ernest Gannahl. Attorney Albert D. Pearce appeared for the accused and Deputy District Attorney Keyes for the people. The following jury was impaneled: John Eppinger, S. P. Stanford, Al Oliver, C. E. Higley, J. E. McKeever, C. Wilson, Frank Fellows, J. B. Wallace, J. M. Henderson, Fred Deal, H. A. Wilson and J. O. Sankey.

After evidence by both parties the case was given to the jury, who then brought in a verdict of "not guilty." This is the case, the report of which taken from the record, appeared in the Glendale Evening News of Monday, June 14.

SENIORS BANQUET

After the commencement exercises in the high school auditorium Thursday evening, the senior class hid themselves to the high school cafeteria, where a most enjoyable hour was spent around the festive board.

The long table which had been placed down the center of the room was tastefully decorated in the class colors of blue and white. The menu, which had been prepared by the cafeteria, consisted of the following:

Shrimp Salad	Fruit Punch
Buns
Olives	Cheese Wafers
Ice Cream	Cake

During the course of the meal, appropriate toasts were made to the following: The Future, the Class Memorial, the Class Teacher, the Faculty, the Members of Class Play Cast, The Stylus Staff, and the Class President.

The class adjourned at midnight with the promise of all that they would attend a watch-night party together next December 31.

Tonight the class holds its farewell dance at the Masonic temple, while tomorrow evening they are received into the ranks of the alumni at a garden party which is to be given at the Richardson place, corner of Riverdale drive and Central avenue.

BAND CONCERT

The Glendale municipal band will give their first concert this (Friday) evening at 8 o'clock on the city hall steps. The program for tonight will be as follows:

March, "Ringling Brothers' Grand Entry" (Sweet).
Overture, "Norma" (Verdi).
Waltz, "Flowers and Smiles" (Mitsud).
Selection from the comic opera, "Wang" (Morse).
"Pilgrims' Chorus," from "Lombardi" (Verdi).
March, "Peace Centennial" (Boisvert).

HIGH SCHOOL CLOSES

The last student body gathering at the Glendale Union high school was held this morning in the auditorium, where the sons and daughters of that famous institution gathered once more for a farewell glimpse of the familiar walls. Some there were to return next fall, others to return no more. The session was enlivened with yells and songs.

The student body business was finished for the year and then the awarding of honors was in place. Coach Wight took charge of giving out the big "Gs" to athletes, while Miss Flood awarded the honor and activity pins. At the close of the session cards were presented and Glendale Union high school is closed until the early fall.

Cecil Crandall, who received a special gold activity pin for his musical services, instead of making a speech in response to the honor, played Dvorak's "Humoresque" and an encore, one of his own compositions, an "Andante," which produced a profound effect on his sensitive audience.

THE WORTH OF A SOUL

DIVINE ALCHEMY CHANGES THE STONY HUMAN HEARTS TO PURE GOLD

By J. E. Morrison, Los Angeles, Cal.

"Likewise, I say unto you, there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth."—Luke 15:10.

The difference in human lives is very largely a difference in standards of value. If you know what a man deems of greater and what he considers of lesser importance, you have a key to his character and an index to his future. All effort and incentive also are proportionate to realization of value. No man would leave the comforts of home to go to the goldfields of Alaska merely to obtain worthless sand or stone. He is willing to endure all the rigors and hardships of that Arctic climate because he hopes to obtain possession of a certain yellow metal which will bring to him and his loved ones not only the necessities, but also the luxuries of life. If in these coming days we are to get men and women to sacrifice their time and strength and substance in the work of the salvation of souls, it will be because they have been gripped by the great truth that a human soul is the most precious treasure in all God's universe. And just in proportion as they realize the value of a soul will they put forth earnest effort in the work of human rescue.

Man has subjected the value of a human soul to almost every commodity under the shining sun. First of all, man has subordinated the importance of a soul to conquest and ambition. We think of the awful tragedy being enacted upon European soil today. Millions of men grappling in a death struggle in the greatest war in history. Little thought had the rulers, who plunged a continent into this terrible vortex, for the worth of a human life. The blood of the bravest and best sons of earth is being poured out, not for the benefit of mankind, but merely to gratify revenge, selfish ambition, and lust for power.

Man the Crown of Creation

Moreover, man has sacrificed the value of human souls for the sake of creating and building great organizations. We look upon men merely as material to make a school, a lodge, a church, a state, a political party, as we would think of bricks or stone to build a building. We have yet to learn the great truth that the state was made for man, not man for the state. Some have even thought of revivals as merely means to build up religious organizations. The church, like the individual, might gain the world and yet lose its own soul.

Moreover, man has subjected the value of a human soul merely to the accumulation of property. Our own age has become money mad. We speak of the ancient Israelites worshipping a golden calf; we are doing the same today. There is no enterprise today so dangerous to the physical, the intellectual or moral welfare, but if the pay is big enough there will be always multitudes who will take the risk.

The laws of our country are written more for the protection of property than for the protection of life. Gold is the god of more people than Jesus. The golden rule has too often given way to the rule of gold. Prophecy tells us the time will come when man will be regarded of more value than much fine gold, but we have not yet reached that period. We are caring more for money than for manhood, more for coin than for character, more for dollars than for duty. Many people are more interested in making a living than they are in making a life.

Furthermore, man has subjected the value of a soul to appetite and physical gratification. I ask, why do you indulge in that filthy habit? Does it make a better man of you? Give you higher ideals or strength of character? No, you say, it is merely because I like to do it. Sometimes when they wish to be especially harsh, they call some men hogs. This is an insult—to the hogs. Lots of men will do things that hogs will not think of doing. You couldn't get a four-footed hog to put his hat on the side of his head and stick a cigarette between his teeth. You could not get a thoroughbred swine to swallow the booze that human hogs are doing in your city every day. A man and a dog will go into a booze joint and after a half hour the man will come out reeling and staggering, but the dog will come out sober and walk off like a gentleman. Many a young man will stain and soil and scar his eternal soul merely for the gratification of appetite and a night's indulgence.

THE NEW WARFARE

Machine guns and quick-firing rifles have revolutionized warfare. This has always been prophesied and doubtless the effect of modern rapid-fire guns was in Paul Kruger's mind when he stated just before the Boer war broke out that the price the English would have to pay for the war which he anticipated would "stagger humanity."

Though the price the English paid for the Boer war was staggering enough, it was nothing compared to what they and the other nations of the old world have been paying down in the present unpleasantness. Already Britain has paid a toll of 260,000 men, killed, wounded and missing—a figure in advance of the original standing army that country was able to send to Europe.

None of the European nations had much idea of what this war was going to develop. They, Germany included, had an idea that there would be vast maneuvers and large turning movements and serious losses of men and material; but none of them had the slightest idea that after nine months the war would turn into a series of violent assaults on entrenchments; and that the whole campaign from the borders of Russia to the gates of Calais would be fought with entrenching tools and machine guns.

Europe is now a vast underground camp. The opposing armies are shelling each other and shooting each other down with machine guns and it looks as though the victory would remain to the country that is able to keep up the greatest supply of ammunition. It is stated that the French began the war with the idea that with the reserve of ammunition they had in hand the ammunition needed by the army could be supplied from government factories turning out 13,500 shells a day. The French factories are now turning out 170,000 shells daily and even that is not enough. A couple of French batteries would probably be able to shoot away all the field-gun ammunition in the United States in three days.

There are serious lessons in these facts to every nation. The nations of the world must get together and agree to find some other method of settling international disputes than war or the next generation will find itself engaged in a desperate struggle to manufacture more ammunition than its prospective enemies.

It is said that already big factories like the Remington Arms company are making preparations for the manufacture of machine guns and ammunition on an enormous scale. Surely it is time that the nations that love peace and know that only in peace can the ideals of humanity be found, got together and strove to find some deliverance from this swamp of death into which international rivalries have led the world.

ADDRESS BY DR. E. D. WARFIELD

ers." "When I was the head of an eastern college I used to like to realize as the boys came in as eager freshmen and went out as hopeful graduates that each was a shining spirit, beloved at home. Shining spirits you all are; heirs of immortality, going forth, I trust, to make of this earth a nobler, sweeter place. You must set before you the ideal of becoming heirs of immortality, of salvation, ready to sacrifice yourselves, determined to make good, to make this world of the living God a better place than you find it."

"It is a great thing to be young in a great country and a great age. It is a great thing to have knowledge. All knowledge is a precious possession. Learn how to use it. Forget yourselves. It is the business of youth to live so that it can hand on its divine gift of knowledge to the generation that follows. You can bless the world by the utilities you bestow on it; by the culture you gain and by the knowledge you are thereby enabled to hand on to the coming age."

TROPICO

Mrs. Charles M. Turck of Glendale avenue, who has been indisposed the past few weeks, has recovered sufficiently to permit her to enjoy a few short motor trips.

Miss Milcent Virdep, the renowned pianist, and the equally noted violinist, Mr. Ferdinand Rigali, accompanied by Mrs. Virden, have returned from a most successful concert tour of the West and Middle West larger cities.

Mrs. A. W. Collins and son, Harwood Collins, motored to El Centro the first of the week as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Webster, where they will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest J. Morgan, who but recently took up their residence in the Imperial valley. Mr. and Mrs. Webster and party visited the San Diego exposition while enroute to El Centro.

After an absence of several years in Australia, Mr. Edward Ayers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ayers of Palmer avenue, has returned to Tropic. While in Australia Mr. Ayers took unto himself a most charming helpmate. Mr. Ayers is engaging in business in Los Angeles, where he will make his residence. Visits to the parental home on Palmer avenue will afford his many friends in Tropic and Glendale an opportunity of renewing their acquaintance with Eddie Ayers as he was familiarly known years ago.

The commencement exercises of the Glendale Union high school Thursday evening were very interesting and many were the proud and happy parents and friends of the fifty-nine graduates who filled the auditorium to witness this interesting class graduation. Of the graduates from Tropic were Basil Olds Boon, Willard Charles Brown, Miss Julia Ehmke, Miss Pauline Hamilton, Miss Dorothy Hobbs, Miss Ethel Rhodes, Miss Josephine Starr—all of whom acquitted themselves with honor and pride to relatives and friends alike.

PERSONALS

Harold Adams and wife of 463 Pacific avenue have another bouncing boy, their second. Both mother and child are doing well.

Percy Ap. Roberts, editor and proprietor of the River Falls (Wis.) News, visited at the H. A. Wilson home on Kenwood street.

A. E. Cockshutt and family have gone to Fresno for a few months, Mr. Cockshutt having secured steady work there on a big building in process of erection.

Mrs. M. Cadd and daughter, Elizabeth, who have been staying with W. S. May and children for a year or more, went to Des Moines, Iowa, this week to spend the summer.

Mrs. Myron L. Watson and young son, George Byron, who have been visiting at the former's mother's ranch near Whittier for the past two weeks, returned to their home, 1450 West Second street, Thursday.

T. D. Knauss, who now lives on Orange Grove avenue, is putting up a six-room house on the lot he recently purchased at 1442 Vine street. He and his father-in-law, J. B. Wright, are doing the carpenter work.

Miss Lillie Smith, one of the primary teachers in the Pacific avenue school, who has been living with Mrs. Carrie Adams, 469 Pacific avenue, started last Tuesday to Morrisville, Vermont, fifteen miles from the capital, Montpelier, to spend the summer in her childhood home.

Mrs. R. H. Rodgers of Pasadena and Mrs. Eugene Parkman and her daughter, Pauline, of Aledo, Ills., were guests at the J. B. McClellan home, 318 South Central avenue, on Wednesday. Miss Pauline remained for a longer visit. Miss Anabel McClellan and Miss Pauline were former schoolmates in Aledo, Ills.

Mr. Joseph L. Shugart, wife and son have returned to their home in Omaha after a very delightful visit with Mr. Shugart's parents at 224 Belmont street. The family motored to Long Beach Friday, then visited Catalina island for two days. Mr. Shugart was very much pleased with Glendale, its surroundings and its climate.

Mrs. T. H. Connors of 884 Damasco court, has gone to Redondo Beach with her children to stay two months. Mr. Connors is buyer for a big dry goods house with stores in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Fresno, with headquarters in the latter city. He has been urged repeatedly by his employers to move to Fresno, they even offering to buy his Glendale property outright for cash, but Mrs. Connors prefers to stay in Glendale.

Frank Tuttle, who came here from Vancouver, B. C., more than a year ago with his invalid wife and remained some months, going back to Vancouver when his wife begged to end her days in the old home, came back to Glendale a few weeks ago to be with his parents, A. Tuttle and wife, 871 Damasco court. Recently he was summoned to Vancouver to take charge of a chain of moving picture theaters. He is an expert in this line.

For having been tossed off a car by a peevish conductor a resident of Los Angeles has just been awarded $500. This salves his pride and otherwise he had been unhurt. Pretty fair bargain.

"All Cats look grey— at Night!"

"JUST Rubber and Canvas—pumped full of air!"

So thinks the Tire User who buys Pneumatics "Blind," without comparison after thorough investigation.

So thinks the Car Owner who buys from the Cut Price Dealer, the "just as good" Tire on which that Dealer quotes him the biggest discount off a Price List specially printed up for that purpose.

So thinks the Man whose Tire bill averages nearly half of his entire Season's running Expense, when it need not average one-fourth, if he would only "Work his head" and, once for all, learn the Tire Game.

THERE are Car Owners who regularly get 25% to 50% MORE Mileage, per Dollar invested in Tires, than do the Owners of other Cars driven with equal care, under equivalent road conditions.

The latter type of Owner is apt to conclude offhand (from his own experience) that all Tires must be Short-lived and Unsatisfactory.

Now this is to tell him that there is as much difference between the Mileage and Resilience of different brands of Tires, when the facts are investigated, and proven through actual Service, as there is difference between the Color of Cats—when viewed by Daylight.

This is to inform him that three Rubber Factories—using precisely the same quantity and quality of Materials might, and sometimes do, produce (through the difference in their Rubber EXPERIENCE and efficiency methods) Tires of such widely different Mileage-Result as to average 3000 Miles, 4000 Miles, and 5000 Miles respectively—under parallel road conditions.

COST of production is therefore no sure guide to the Mileage and Resilience which can be put into such a subtle and "temperamental" product as the Rubber in a Pneumatic Tire.

And, though The B. F. Goodrich Co. can, and does, put the most Mileage per Dollar invested by the User, into Goodrich Safety-Tread Tires, they do not interpret this as a reason why they should charge a higher price, to include an Insurance Premium which would place their "Adjustment Basis" beyond the safe and reasonable minimum that Bad Roads and Carless Driving make necessary.

Because of its Manufacturing Advantages, its Precision Methods, and Waste-reducing Processes (resulting from its 45 years' EXPERIENCE in the working of Rubber), The B. F. Goodrich Co. can afford to and does, offer the greatest Mileage in Tires at the lowest price per Mile.

It sells the standard grade of Goodrich Safety Tires at 10% to 30% lower prices than other non-skid brands which "Guarantee" greater Mileage but cannot prove delivery of greater Mileage in actual use.

excellence, were exchanged for gold pins.

H. Darwin Kirschman led the class honor list. His achievement was highly creditable and he had been made class valedictorian. Standing next to him were two young ladies who divided the second honors.

Those entitled to honor pins were: J. P. Bennett, Gwendolen Meredith Claffin, Elliot G. Colby, Grace Cramp-ton, Kathleen Dodge, Vivian B. Engle, Dorothy Hobbs, H. Darwin Kirschman, Dorothy Koethen, Theodore Curtis Koethen, Benjamin H. Nichols, Gladys Merle Oliver, Cecilia Peterson, Morse Maitland Preeman, Edith Watanen, Florence L. Wheeler. Those sixteen won the gold pin for scholarship during the four years' course.

Donald Cowlin and Purman Bennett had won pins for excellence in debating.

Gilbert Cowan, Merle Oliver and Dorothy Hobbs had distinguished themselves by special activity when work of an arduous nature for the benefit of the class had to be done. The devoted and intelligent activities which had characterized the conduct of those students entitled them to special recognition and they also got the gold pins.

Theodore Koethen and Chase Story had given special services in connection with the electric work on the stage and in connection with other phases of that work and they also received the honor pins. Purman Bennett also had earned special honors for his great success in oratory. Cecil Crandall, who had entered with the class, but had withdrawn on the advice of his friends to devote himself to special study of the violin, had earned the honor by his constant assistance of the school orchestra on special occasions.

Margaret Harrison, by her excellent art work for "The Stylus," had also earned the pin. Altogether, the principal expressed himself as satisfied with the work of the class.

Those boys receiving the Glendale Union high school "G" for athletic ability during the senior year were: Hastings Bidwell, Ben Nichols, Jr., Montgomery Coole, Morse Preeman, John D. Stauffacher and Harold Latta.

Dr. A. L. Bryant, president of the board of trustees, then presented the diplomas. He complimented the class on having so large a percentage of their number going forward to the higher education and advised them to cultivate "three friends"—the older people for their counsel, the children for their innocence, themselves for their self-respect.

The presentation of diplomas was then made. Each student was loudly applauded.

The senior double quartet then sang "O My Love Is Like a Red, Red Rose." This composition was the work of another Glendale high school graduate, Pauline Hamilton, who is a member of the class of 1915. This tuneful and clever setting of the old song is deserving of recognition not only from the fact that it is the work of a high school pupil, but also on account of its intrinsic merit. It speaks volumes for the training given the pupils by Mrs. Dora Gibson that two of this year's class should have distinguished themselves by original compositions in music.

The school orchestra then played Schubert's well-known "Marche Militaire" and the commencement program came to an end.

WHAT IS A SOUL WORTH?

appreciation. All during the centuries your heavenly father has been endeavoring to impress upon mankind how great a value he set upon human life. He has shown this by the environment with which he has surrounded his creation. If the environment of man is great, how much greater is his endowment. If an artist would spend a fabulous sum upon a frame for a painting, would you not reasonably expect the picture within the frame would be of greater value? Marvellous indeed is the physical endowment of man.

The Price of a Man

God has shown the great worth he set upon a human life by the gift of his own son. First, by the incarnation of Jesus, when God for all time deigned to occupy a human life. He forever set his stamp and seal upon that life. Also by the work of Christ he revealed his conception of human worth. There was no life he did not deem of great value. He delighted to go before the dawn of the morning to heal the blind, the lame and the leper. He put his strong, everlasting arms down beneath the lowest stratum of society, and thus lifted up the entire structure.

Jesus emphasized the value of a soul. At one time he declared: "Of how much more value is a man than a sheep." Some thoroughbred stock raisers will get as high as one thousand dollars for a sheep. In Madagascar and other heathen countries, before the missionaries went, you could buy a full grown man for three dollars. I do not know where you can buy a man for three dollars now, unless it is in some of these cities when they are voting on the question of licensing booze; then you can buy some fellows for a glass of beer—and then pay more than they are worth. Why has the proportion changed in our civilization and the value of a man constantly risen? It has been due to the workings of Christ's gospel in human souls. At another time Jesus exclaimed, as he saw the sparrows flitting from branch to branch: No sparrow falls to the ground without your father's notice. If God will attend the funeral of a sparrow, will he not care for you and me?

There is a tendency in many quarters to trust to other agencies for the uplifting of man and the gaining of human rights, rather than to the gospel plan. Labor unions, legislation, can accomplish something, but comparatively little. If the working people of this country ever get their rights it will be through the compelling might of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

The Dynamics of Social Reform

Whenever you get an employer soundly converted you will have a man that will look upon his business as a means of serving God. It is his opportunity to contribute to human welfare. And when you get an employee thoroughly converted he will look upon his employer, not as one from whom he is to get as much as he can, and to give as little as possible in return, but he will have a spirit to labor for the common good. The motto of both employer and employee will be: "All for each and each for all." More and more I feel the importance of the value of Christianity, not simply for "the sweet by and by," but for the "nasty now and now;" not only to get men to a home in heaven when they die, but also to get them to have a heaven in the home while they live. When the jeweled hand of wealth grasps the calloused hand of toil, and both are clasped by the pierced hand of the Son of God, it will solve the problems of strikes and lockouts, and solve them rightly, too.

Womanhood never had a champion till Christ came. Woman was merely the toy or slave of man. It is the gospel that has given woman her proper place in society. A Christless woman is the most ungrateful creature on earth, when everything she has she owes to Jesus. Childhood had no champion till Christ came. Even the philosopher Plato advocated the abandonment of superfluous children. "If you have more in your family than you want," said he, "put them out on the mountain and feed them to the wild beasts." Jesus said: "Suffer the little children to come unto me."

In the pearls of Christ's parables, as recorded in the fifteenth chapter of Luke, Jesus spoke of the lost sheep, the lost silver and the lost son. In the first case, one out of one hundred was lost; in the second, one out of ten; in the third, one out of two, but in each case the thing lost was of value and there was joy in the heart of the owner when the lost was found. Likewise, said Jesus, "There is joy in the presence of the angels over one sinner that repenteth."

God's Yearning Over Souls

There are many things that the people on this earth are interested in that the angels in heaven would pay no attention to at all. Women will scramble at a bargain counter worse than a football scrimmage. They will talk by the hour about styles in hats and gowns, while the angels would not stop to think for a moment whether they were dressed in silk or calico. Men will talk politics by the hour and sit up all night merely to hear the election returns, and the angels would merely smile at their foolishness. Suppose everything you have said in the last six months had been recorded on phonograph tablets and you were tied in your chair and all these things ground out in your ears. Wouldn't it make you feel foolish? How much of the thought and time and strength of many of the average persons is absorbed with the poor, foolish things that perish with the moment!

In the last place, God has shown how great a value he sets upon a human soul by the sacrifice and death of Jesus Christ. Whatsoever one is willing to die for, that he counts of great worth. If God deemed our salvation from sin a matter of such infinite importance that in the person of Christ he was willing to die for us, certainly it is a matter worth living for. The rescue of a soul from eternal death is the most important business that ever occupied human effort and attention.

A friend coming over from Europe said that when out in mid-ocean the cry went up, "A man overboard!" immediately the whistles blew, the engines were reversed, the lifeboats were lowered, lifelines were thrown out, all the business on that great steamship was stopped to rescue one lost man. If we could but comprehend it, we would see that all about us lives are overboard; struggling in the billows of sin.

They That Win Many to Righteousness

Supposing that I should announce that on some night of the coming week, at a most unseasonable hour, say at 2 o'clock in the morning, I would divulge publicly a secret process by which ordinary rocks and stone could be immediately changed into nuggets of pure gold. Talk about excitement! The telegraph and telephone would spread the news all over the surrounding states. Every steam and electric road would run special cars and trains from all directions. By 6 o'clock on the evening before the building would be packed and every street would be crowded by eager throngs, eager to hear the news. They would climb up on the roof and tear off the boards. As soon as they found the secret, without waiting for the light of day, they would start out with lanterns, gathering up stones.

Supposing you should stop a man and ask his opinion about the tariff or the reserve banking system. He would say, "Don't bother me; I am busy." Supposing you should try to talk to him about what baseball team has the best prospects for winning the pennant in the National league. He would say, "Don't talk to me about baseball; I am busy." His eagerness to obtain the new-found wealth would make everything else seem insignificant. But we have something far greater than this, a divine alchemy by which the poor, hard, stony human hearts can be changed into the pure gold of children of God and a citizen of the eternal kingdom. Here is a work worth your while. It is a man's job. It challenges your best strength and thought and effort. Save a man if you can, or a woman, or a child. Save some one. There will be joy in the heart of the saved one. There will be joy in your heart; yea, there will be joy among the angels in heaven.

Watch a man's acts—then you have the best measure of his character!
